PLOTS THAT FADED

CHAPTER XLIII.
As the days dragged their long length by, Clarence Neville's hard battle with his sorrow; his only solace was to delve deeply into the hardest work; his only solace was to delve deeply into the hardest work; his only solace was to delve deeply into the hardest work.

When he heard the wedding bells ringing for a marriage that was to be a disaster, he felt as if the world had turned upside down. He felt as if the world had turned upside down. He felt as if the world had turned upside down.

He found his young secretary a valuable aid to him in carrying out his plan, searching through the dusty tomes of his grand old library for the dates and items which would be necessary for this great masterpiece which was to occupy such a prominent place in the century's literary achievements.

To accomplish his allotted task, Clarence Neville was obliged to remain at the judge's home, instead of doing his office work, in the city. The first night he spent at the judge's home, he found that he would not meet any of his old comrades, nor any one who might know him, or cause him to remember the past which he was trying so hard to forget.

Lovely Lillian Harvey encouraged her father greatly in his idea of writing the great history, and at having a young secretary remain at home, diligently searching out the needed dates upon which he must depend for the accuracy of his work.

It was her friend, Bob, whose attention she had in vain attempted to attract. How long he was there, passing over in the opposite box Clarence Neville never knew.

Suddenly he was aroused from his slumber by a dissonant clash in the music, and a hoarse voice cried out in a shrill, shrill cry that sent a thrill of horror through the bosom of every woman being present—the horrible cry of "Fire! Fire! The building is on fire!"

CHAPTER XLIV.

"Fire! Fire!" The cry was taken up by a score of chorals in the vast auditorium, and even as it was uttered a dense cloud of black smoke poured out of the rear auditorium.

No man could describe the scene which followed—the cries of men and women, the air until it was like pandemonium.

There was a wild rush for the exits, where the strong pushed down the weak, and trampled over them in their mad desire to escape.

At the first cry the old judge seized his daughter in his left arm, and calling to Neville to take her, dashed up the aisle. Clarence Neville, who had been standing near the door, followed.

TALKED REDUCTION

BEFORE LARGE CROWD

H. Edgar Allen Warned People Against Paid Letters in Newspapers.

Mayor Lees and Controller Spence of Toronto Gave Strong Addresses.

The Citizens' Campaign Committee is leaving no stone unturned in its efforts to secure the proposed license reduction on the 6th of January. Yesterday afternoon a large mass meeting was held in the new I. O. O. F. auditorium on Gore street, at which between five and six hundred citizens gathered in the movement were present.

His Worship Mayor Lees, occupied the chair, and with him upon the platform were Ald. Morris, Ald. Milne, Sec. Jones, Mr. Geo. W. Carey, Mr. J. C. Springstead and several other prominent citizens.

Rev. H. E. Allen, chairman of the committee opened the meeting with a short and fervent prayer, after which Mayor Lees addressed the assembly. In the course of his remarks he said: "I have no doubt that some people may criticize my taking sides in this matter now before the public. The Mayor is generally supposed to be a friend of a mental quantity. I find, however, in looking over the list of former years when to gain license reduction it was my duty to sign on assuming the mayoralty office, a certain class of citizens that it is my duty of a Mayor to recommend to the citizens any motion, by-law, etc., which in his opinion will be of financial, municipal, or sanitary benefit to the city at large. That surely justifies my stand in the matter, as nothing of which I at present know, either improvement of works, or anything of that nature, will ever do as much as this material good as the proposed cutting off of the twenty-two licenses.

This year the personal element does not enter into the question as much as in former years when to gain license reduction it was my duty to sign on assuming the mayoralty office, a certain class of citizens that it is my duty of a Mayor to recommend to the citizens any motion, by-law, etc., which in his opinion will be of financial, municipal, or sanitary benefit to the city at large. That surely justifies my stand in the matter, as nothing of which I at present know, either improvement of works, or anything of that nature, will ever do as much as this material good as the proposed cutting off of the twenty-two licenses.

Take the influence of liquor upon the places of public entertainment. It is absolutely incapacitates them. In our police force alone, some six or seven men have been discharged for being in the last year from drinking. Only last week we had two pitiful cases of this. I am not condemning the police, I sympathize with them. In their position there is a great temptation to indulge, but then, the indulgence is going to render them unfit for their public duties."

At this point Ald. Lalend appeared, reading his large Sunday School class of young men up to the front row. The mayor smiled benignly at such enthusiasm on the part of a councillor, and then continued:

In 1874 there were 127 licenses in this city. In 1875 110, in 1876 only 64. At that time the city's population was only 30,000. In 1888 the number of licenses was again reduced up to 111. A public organization, very similar to the present Citizens' Campaign Committee, then came into action and discovered that the license commissioners had granted some 20 more licenses than were permitted by law. These were cut off in 24 hours. Again in 1889 there were 91 licenses, in 1894, 75, in 1904, 72, in 1905, 68, in 1910, 66, in 1911, 57, and in 1912 only 30. In 1874 Hamilton possessed 32 shop licenses and in 1912 I look for but 10.

I will be mayor of this city for but two weeks longer. In my next term I have worked hard for public improvement, especially the Hydro, but if I can see these 27 licenses cut off I shall feel that Hamilton has been materially benefited than by any railway extensions or the growing of new industries. Who will suffer if these licenses are cut off? On except perhaps the underworld, sawbuckers and the like (cheers).

Mr. Allen spoke next: a public meeting before up in the measure for the assistance of the committee work.

Mr. Allen announced that the general mass meeting of this committee would be announced in the press on Saturday evening at the Y.M.C.A. building.

"I have a few references to make as to the press. I am not criticizing our newspapers. I have many personal friends on the different staffs, but I do want to explain their attitude in regard to the present question. All the papers have decided upon a neutral policy, and have agreed to accept no notices favoring one party or the other, unless such notices are paid for. I want the public to understand this, as several letters have appeared lately purporting to be signed by disinterested ratepayers, which take up the liquor man's side of the discussion. These letters are inserted by the liquor man, as no private ratepayer is going to pay about $25 to list his views in the public press. While in no wise criticizing the papers, I earnestly wish to draw the citizen's attention to this fact. We must redouble our efforts, and that is why we are taking notice of the feeble stratagems of men who see their business doomed."

Rev. Mr. Allen sat down amid loud applause.

Mr. F. S. Spence, one of the members of the Citizens' Board of Control, spoke in next, delivering a splendid address in favor of temperance and the local reduction. Mr. Spence is a well-known student of the temperance question. He is the Canadian representative at the Holland Temperance Convention, which he attended last year, and despite his heavy municipal duties still follows the question very closely. Added to his knowledge of the situation, Mr. Spence possesses a fine command of the English language, and his speech which makes his address so intensely interesting. In short, he said: "The citizens of Hamilton are very proud to possess a mayor who is firm enough to take such a firm stand on this question. I only regret that all mayors are not cast in the same mould. The present movement in Europe it has become almost general, each country taking it up and endeavoring to wipe out the liquor evil within its boundaries. In Paris, the drink element of the world, all the schools are being placed with signs drawing attention to the student to the dangers of alcohol. In Germany, a land which we always imagine as being peopled with stately beer-drinking Danes, the Kaiser recently issued a statement asking his soldiers, his sailors and his subjects of public trust to refrain from the use of liquor. Take Russia, that dim, remote country of such vast dimensions and countless inhabitants. What has happened there? Up to a short time ago the liquor interests were entirely controlled by the Government. The great of spirituous beverage bore the crest of the Russian eagle. What did the Parliament do there? It took the interests out of the hands of the Government, and now instead of hearkening to the proud insignia of the Russian eagle every bottle of liquor sold in that country carries on its label a picture of a skull and cross bones. In England also the movement is taking on huge proportions, nearly 100,000 licenses being cut off annually. Coming nearer home, what do we find? In the United States there is a population of 90,000,000. Forty-six million of these people live in places where local option is in force. That is, over five per cent. of the United States population is under local law. We next come to Canada and we can think that this country is making a better temperance record than any other part of the world. In New Zealand, St. John's is the only city non-prohibitionary. In Nova Scotia, Halifax is the sole instance of non-prohibition. Even in Quebec the French and Catholics are showing as much interest in temperance reform as their English-speaking Protestant countrymen. What do we find in Ontario? Out of six municipalities, local option is in force in 312. Altogether there are 463 municipalities in Ontario where it is impossible to obtain a new license. In Westchester county there were 142 in 1874. To-day there are only 22.

Will Hamilton follow this generally temperance for temperance reform? Undoubtedly so. The only question is will this year or at some later period. In taking licenses from 32 citizens of

PASTEURIZED MILK MEANS PERFECT HEALTH

MANY diseases have been traced to milk produced by unhealthy cows. Our system of handling the milk from the time it leaves the farm until it is bottled is scientific and ensures absolute cleanliness in every particular.

We have the most modern pasteurizing plant in the city, and our methods leave no chance for sediment or germs of any kind to remain in the milk, the result being that satisfaction is guaranteed.

The cows from which our milk is produced have been examined by competent veterinarians and declared free from any trace of disease; that is what makes our cream and milk the purest obtainable.

It sells at the same price as ordinary milk.

17 Suicide Attempts.

(By Times Special Wire.)

Montreal, Dec. 22.—Investigation into a charge of loitering, lodged against Hazel E. Cook, an actress, who gives her home address as Spokane, Washington, revealed the fact that during the past three weeks she has attempted to commit suicide seven times, and on each occasion her attempt has been frustrated.

Mrs. Cook came here to a stock company, but her position. Four times she has been prevented from hanging herself, several times she was found preparing to jump into the St. Lawrence river, and once she drank coal oil, and on a number of occasions she had her hair cut with scissors, once nearly opening a vein in her arm.

This morning she was arrested by the police clambering over a parapet preparatory to jumping from the mountain lookout.

Mrs. Cook will be examined as to her sanity and probably deported.
